Chrome's OS Update Bug Forces Internet Explorer Users to Switch to Google Chrome to Browse the Web April 16, 2017 As soon as Chrome gets updated, Internet Explorer users will have to switch to Google Chrome to browse the web. Today, Microsoft announced that the company is looking to change the terms of the now outdated agreement between them and Google. This change will require users of the older Internet

Explorer versions to use Google Chrome. As Google Chrome is the current standard of browser, any changes to the browser software will automatically force users to upgrade their Internet Explorer to get the same result. Chrome users will also lose access to the features available in the browser. The most useful of them being the ability to open the web with a single click. Apart from that, Chrome also offers the ability to share anything on the web through the social networks which is not available in Internet Explorer. More importantly, the Chrome users will no longer receive the regular notifications from the companies that make use of the browser software. This is because Chrome is not part of the Windows operating system and so it doesn't get the notifications. As a result, many companies are providing Internet Explorer updates for Chrome users. They will no longer receive the notifications while trying to make an update, but will be alerted when the updated version of the browser gets installed. Since Chrome is not a part of the Microsoft's operating system, there is no major concern regarding the loss of the software. The only concern is the future of Internet Explorer. What's New In?

Get Article Lite is a small software application specialized in scraping articles from various websites and saving them to HTML or plain text file format using a multi-threaded algorithm. User-friendly layout The clean feature lineup of the utility makes it easier for you to understand the function of each dedicated parameter. The main panel is divided into two small windows: one is used for displaying a list with user-defined keywords while the other reveals a list with custom proxies. Additionally, you may start or stop the process, view the total number of saved articles, as well as check out the elapsed time. Importing, exporting and downloading settings Get Article Lite allows you to import keywords and proxies from plain text file format. In addition, you can manually enter custom keywords and proxies, and pick the saving directory. Furthermore, you can make the application save the settings upon exit, select the directories from where you want to scrap data (A1Articles, EzineMark, Sooper Articles, Amazines, Article Alley), save the information to HTML file format, include title in the file, append directory to filename, as well as embed article URL. Plus, you may disable the option used for creating folders for each keyword. Assessing its performance Tests have shown that Get Article Lite carries out a task pretty quickly. It managed to grab and save 446 articles in one minute and thirteen seconds. It remains friendly on system resources, so the overall performance of the computer is not hampered. An overall efficient article scraper All in all, Get Article Lite integrates an essential feature pack for helping you scrape articles and save them on your computer for offline viewing based on a set of user-defined keywords. If you are looking for advanced options, such as original text formatting, more than 20 directories to scrape, downloading mode for articles with the exact phrase in the content or exact phrase in the title and content, minimum/maximum words in the article, duplicate article detection and translation mode, you can check out the professional edition of the utility which can be found on the official website of the app. Get Article Lite is a
