Adobe's AI platform, Adobe Sensei, has been augmented for the Photoshop Innovation Suite 2019, and you can expect to see it appearing in other future products from Adobe. First, it has been improved for the Adobe Creative Cloud ecosystem — taking advantage of the full learning ability of Adobe Sensei, Adobe now allows you to author, edit and alter AI creations within most creative apps. Adobe XD, a 3D design tool, is sure to get a lot of attention for 2019. It offers a feature-rich set of 3D apps, and an entire app ecosystem is planned to expand the software. By designing, you can make 3D logos, 3D posters, 3D packaging, and so much more. Get the pro-level apps and Adobe XD right now, and get 10% off at Adobe.com. To get a ball rolling, here are some of the main things we plan to deliver in 2019 and 2020 (note that "2020" is really going to happen in mid-2020):

- Support for high-dynamic-range (HDR) RAW (otherwise known as DNG, and An incredibly important future innovation.
- High performance filters. All filters currently in Photoshop will still work, but we will provide fast access to them (via the newly introduced "f' keys)
- Monkey-pawing for the new GPU-powered layered 2D technology, which we know is a really important future upgrade.
- Native GPU-level 3D. For users who do this already, those of you who have not upgraded can, for a small fee, upgrade to native 3D, and use all the 3D features in Photoshop;
- Upgraded performance and stability across the board. Staying on the native Graphical Processing Unit (GPU) is already a big step forward, but we're working on more performance-enhancing features ("scalelite," anyone?) that will deliver more stable performance for you guys.
- More Premiere Elements for macOS. We are accelerating our roadmap to bring both Adobe Premiere Pro and Adobe Premiere Elements to the Mac in a native architecture. This means they will be available for all users not just those who upgrade.
- Stability is core to everything we do at Adobe, and we have all been focussed on solving stability issues within Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, Premiere, their respective applications (including DaVinci Resolve) and other Adobe products. So we are very excited to bring you these Roadmap updates.

It is a powerful tool that performs the functions in Photoshop very well. With new additions, you can image transfer complete libraries of RAW files with ease. You can combine image shot with The Bridge with the new feature that is a new addition to Photoshop and Envato Market. You can also automatically compare the images during a stitching sequence, and you can adjust the brightness of the images using the new features as well. Other new features include the ability to clone and transform layers, a better grid system for easier alignment, and the ability to merge multiple shapes into one in the pastel pencil tool. If you can imagine it, Photoshop can help you create it. It's worth noting that a number of the upcoming features in the Adobe Photoshop 2020 roadmap are already available as updates for existing versions of the software. That said, there are a number of things that only Photoshop Elements can do, but you'll almost certainly need to make do with it in the meantime. There's also a number of important features in Photoshop that haven't made it to Elements, such as the new design tools, online performance enhancements, and a range of brand new features. Nupi Collections is built in to Photoshop. It's like layers, but a bit different. It makes it easy to create collections of items by selecting collections and applying styles. That's a very useful thing to know when you need to apply a particular look to several items in a short period of time. You can also create your own collections, by grouping objects into collections of your own, and save them as collections. It's a small addition, and one that will be further integrated in to Photoshop in future.
