One known type of a hydraulic braking system for a vehicle includes a master cylinder for generating a hydraulic brake pressure for braking, a master-cylinder piston that is operable in response to an operating force to move a brake-apply piston of the master cylinder to generate a hydraulic brake pressure, and a hydraulic reservoir connected to the master-cylinder piston. An electromagnetic valve disposed in the hydraulic reservoir is opened or closed in response to an electric signal to supply a hydraulic brake fluid from a hydraulic pressure generator to or drain the hydraulic brake fluid from the hydraulic pressure generator for braking operations, respectively. Such a known type of the brake system as mentioned above is disclosed in Japanese patent Laid-open
